Sickly Stuarts The Medical Downfall

Professor Holmes's claim that the failure of the Stuart dynasty to last was entirely due to ill-health must be viewed with scepticism. It is also a bizarre view of history when he compares the Stuarts with the Bourbons and the Habsburgs, and then suggests that the countries of those other dynasties became more prosperous because of the longevity of their rulers.

The Sickly Stuarts—the Medical Downfall of a Dynasty

Focusing on the dynasty's health, Holmes concludes that "disease and disability brought down the Stuart dynasty," because "Parliament gained power each time Stuart rule faltered because of sickness and infirmity."

The Sickly Stuarts: The Medical Downfall of a Dynasty ...

Disease, disaster and disability plagued the Stuart Family during the period they ruled England - 1603 to 1714. Dementia in James I, the beheading of Charles I, acute mercury poisoning in Charles II, a nosebleed in James II, acute hemorrhagic smallpox in Mary II, and lupus erythematosus in Queen Anne took them 'off the throne', one by one. Frederick Holmes, M.D., Distinguished Professor Emeritus of the University of Kansas Medical Center, has carefully documented the medical problems of this ...

Sickly Stuarts The Medical Downfall Of A Dynasty

Neither in Milo Keynes' review of Professor Holmes' book The Sickly Stuarts—the Medical Downfall of a Dynasty (June 2004 JRSM 1) nor in Graham Brack's comments on the review (August 2004 JRSM 2) is mention made of Holmes' view of the hypothesis that James VI/I suffered from familial porphyria. Having described the renal findings at the necropsy of James VI/I, Holmes writes 'this finding negates and lays to rest the presumption of Dr Ida Macalpine and her colleagues that James and his ...
