This book is a trilogy wrapped up in one pretty little (and very long) package. The books are Empress, The Riven Kingdom and Hammer of God. I have a lot of thoughts about this series so bare with me here while I try to make it somewhat comprehensible. I've written a review about Empress here about my love for Hekat, the protagonist of that book. I know a lot of people that read it hate

Godspeaker - Wikipedia

This second book in the godspeaker trilogy captured my attention more than the first. We have crossed the desert from Majjak to Ethrea, and met princess Rhian. Rhian's father and brothers have died leaving no heir. The advisors of the kingdom fight to marry Rhian to a prince of their own choosing but she has different ideas.

The Riven Kingdom (Godspeaker Trilogy, #2) by Karen Miller

Very different from her previous series, the Godspeaker Trilogy is raw, crude, and at times vulgar. The main character Hekat is psychotic, grown up in a life of pain, blood, and the secret whispers of her god. She is almost unbelievable and almost unlovable but she pulls pity and sympathy as she fights to reach her ambitions and those of her god.

The Godspeaker trilogy is one such, BUT Karen Miller takes care to keep you wondering about the gods. Do gods, as such, really exist in this world? Or are the divine revelations guided by the self-interest of the characters and the magic evoked from less powerful supernatural forces?

Karen Miller's lengthy trilogy concludes with "Hammer of God" (Orbit, 784 pages). The Riven Kingdom (The Godspeaker Trilogy #2) by Karen Miller is part of my catching up of all the fantasy novels I've been meaning to read over the years, and it's one of the titles so far that's led me to believe that Miller is possibly one of the most underrated voices in the genre I've encountered in a while.
